Economic, public health, and political factors are changing at a speed like we have never experienced before — impacting businesses at an equally fast pace. The constant flow of information surrounding these issues and rapidly changing policies and enforcement can make it difficult for companies to separate background noise from issues of concern. During this fast-paced discussion, participants will gain insight into issues of greatest concern, including:

- The COVID vaccine rollout: Coordination among the federal, state, and local levels
- What can the most impacted sectors (i.e., restaurants, travel, and hospitality) expect in the way of additional relief
- The effect of the pandemic and the current political environment on technology businesses
- The anticipated landscape under the new administration
- Potential stimulus programs and who will be eligible
