

Richard Kalson Elected to the Association of Drilled Shaft Contractors Board of Directors

Friday, February 21, 2025

NEW YORK, February 21, 2025 — Richard Kalson, a member of the firm's Construction Law Group, has been elected to the board of directors for the Association of Drilled Shaft Contractors. He will serve a three-year term. The mission of the Association of Drilled Shaft Contractors is to support and advance the drilled shaft, anchored earth retention, and micropile industries. The association also encourages the use of the technologies designed, constructed, supplied, and manufactured by its members to foster safe, quality, and ethical practices.

With 25 years of experience in construction law, Richard is highly sought after by contractors, subcontractors, suppliers, and project owners in litigation and business consultation matters on all phases of the construction process on projects throughout the United States. From vital infrastructure like bridges and airports to complex undertakings such as petrochemical plants and medical centers, he has successfully handled disputes involving highways, schools, retail complexes, warehouses, commercial buildings, hotels, residential developments, ice skating rinks, prisons, government buildings, and beyond.
