

Hugh Marbury Named to Board of Directors of Living Classroom

Friday, March 4, 2022

MARCH 04, 2022, WASHINGTON, D.C., — Hugh Marbury, a member of Cozen O'Connor's Intellectual Property Department, has been named to the Living Classroom's board of directors for the National Capital Region. The National Capital Region headquarters is based in Washington, D.C., with a substantial presence around the Navy Yard.

Living Classrooms provides access to more equitable education, workforce development, community safety, and health and wellness opportunities that enable individuals to achieve their aspirations and build safer, stronger, and healthier communities for all. For over three decades, Living Classrooms have collaborated with community members in Baltimore and Washington, D.C., to create diverse programs that are community-driven, research-based, and ultimately designed to disrupt the ecosystem of poverty that can be directly traced to historic and contemporary racial, social, and economic disparities. Their programs and best practices value the priorities and aspirations of community members and deliver both opportunity and results.

“As a Baltimorean, I am excited to be able to give back to my hometown at the same time I can contribute to the city in which I work,” said Hugh. “Living Classrooms is uniquely positioned to serve both Baltimore and Washington, D.C., and I am excited to see what comes next.”

Marbury focuses his practice on business and intellectual property litigation. His business litigation practice focuses on complex financial transactions and commercial disputes across multiple sectors. His intellectual property litigation practice includes patent, trademark, copyright, and trade secret litigation in diverse technological areas across many industries. Hugh has more than two decades of experience utilizing his considerable knowledge to counsel clients in a wide variety of industries on critical challenges facing their businesses.
