The U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT) has recently announced an Airline Passenger Protection Partnership with state attorney generals (AGs) that effectively deputizes state AGs to investigate consumer complaints against airlines and grants them access to DOT’s consumer complaint database. Airlines and other sellers of air transportation should prepare for increased regulatory scrutiny. This webinar will explore the partnership’s implications and developments that sellers of air transportation should anticipate, drawing upon the unique perspectives and insights of Cozen O’Connor’s Aviation Regulatory and State AG practices.
