

Biden's vaccine mandate will require most Philly-area private sector workers to get a jab

Thursday, November 4, 2021

Jim Sullivan was quoted in the Philadelphia Inquirer discussing the latest on the emergency safety rules from the Biden administration that workers must be vaccinated by January 4 or undergo weekly COVID-19 testing. Jim said the new rules discourage the testing option because they don't require companies to pay for the tests. They also don't require employers to pay for masks. These and other factors will discourage testing and lead more people to get vaccinated, he said. He was also concerned that employers who don't comply could incur large penalties because they could be cited for multiple violations.

To read more of this article, click here.

Related Practice Areas

- Labor & Employment