

What's Next For Trump? Ex-president Has 10 Days to Post Reduced $175m Bond as He Appeals Fraud Judgment

Thursday, March 28, 2024

Jerry Goldfeder was quoted in a New York Post article discussing the First Department's decision to reduce Donald Trump's bond. "It appears that the court accepted Trump's excuse that he could not post the entire amount and wanted to give him the opportunity to post a bond so that his appeal would not be an academic exercise," said Jerry. He noted that the First Department's lowering of the bond doesn't necessarily mean the court will rule in Trump's favor on appeal. "It only means the appellate court is giving him the opportunity to appeal," he said.

To read the full article, click here.

Related Practice Areas

- Commercial Litigation
- Government & Regulatory