

Political Signs, Bylaws, & Free Speech

Tuesday, November 22, 2022

Leni Cummins discusses how condo, co-op, and homeowner association (HOA) boards are grappling with issues related to political signage and messaging in the current divisive political climate in a Q&A session with CooperatorNews.

In the discussion, she shares her thoughts on how condo and co-op boards should remain apolitical, treating all residents equally and enforcing bylaws consistently to avoid potential liability for breach of fiduciary duty.

“Boards of condos and co-ops should not be political; they must treat all shareholders and owners equally,” Leni stated.
