

Stephen Miller Discusses NCAA Enforcement Actions in USA Today

Tuesday, October 8, 2013

In an article titled "Alabama case spotlights Emmert, Saban friendship," Stephen Miller, of Cozen O'Connor's Commercial Litigation Department, discusses NCAA enforcement actions as they relate to recent allegations about an Alabama football player accepting impermissible benefits while at the school. Miller states, "The NCAA has a major credibility problem when it comes to enforcement actions, and that's especially so under Mark Emmert because it seems Emmert picks and chooses when he wants to get involved."
