The new year has brought the most significant changes to the Hart-Scott-Rodino pre-merger notification process since the HSR Act took effect in 1976. These changes will impact nearly all aspects of the HSR process including the information needed to complete the filing, the time and effort required, and, most importantly, what filing parties should – and should not – be doing when considering and preparing for a transaction. In short, much of what you need to know about HSR has now changed.

Join attorneys from Cozen O'Connor's Antitrust Practice to learn what you need to know about the changes to the Hart-Scott-Rodino process, including:

- An overview of the new rule, highlighting the most impactful changes
- What new documents must be included in the filing, including some that are not specifically related to the transaction
- What information companies should maintain in the regular course of business so as to not delay the closing of a transaction
- Dos and don'ts for companies contemplating a transaction
