

Will the Rogers Ruling Drive Competition Reform?

Thursday, January 26, 2023

Michael Osborne was quoted in a National Magazine article discussing the Federal Court of Appeal's ruling to uphold the decision to allow the Rogers Communications and Shaw Communications' merger and the effect it could have on the Competition Commissioner's ability to advocate for reform. "People can agree or disagree [with the decision], but this is an expert tribunal, which heard evidence from the Commissioner, from Rogers, Shaw, Vidéotron, Bell, and Telus," said Michael. "People were cross-examined; they had documents, including those that contradicted what Bell and Telus said; they had expert reports—it's not like a Parliamentary committee which hears from a lot of people who don't know what they're talking about."

To read the full article, click here.

Related Practice Areas

- Antitrust & Competition