

Beware of Pitfalls with Use of In-House Counsel

Alicia G. Curran contributed the article “Beware of Pitfalls with Use of In-House Counsel” for the Defense Research Institute (DRI)’s May issue of For the Defense magazine. Alicia discusses the trends and challenges to maintaining privilege with communications involving in-house counsel, given the scope of testimony required of a Rule 30(b)(6) witness. The article also focuses on benefits and pitfalls in designating in-house counsel as the company’s corporate representative.
