

Things are heating up at OSHA: What to expect in 2022 from OSHA's heat stress/illness enforcement and rulemaking

Location

Glendale, AZ

Date & Time

Start Date: 01/13/2022

Federal OSHA has initiated its rulemaking process for the issuance of an upcoming heat stress standard. This follows enforcement guidance issued in September 2021 that clearly indicated that OSHA believes that most heat illness cases in the workplace can be avoided. Jim Sullivan will discuss what to anticipate from OSHA's rulemaking effort as well as OSHA's ongoing use of the "general duty clause" in issuing citations against employers in the construction industry.

Sponsor

Association of General Contractors of America

in Share X Post

ATTORNEYS

James J. Sullivan, Jr.

Co-Chair, OSHA-Workplace Safety Practice

✉ jjsullivan@cozen.com

📞 \(202\) 912-4841912-4841)

RELATED PRACTICES

Labor & Employment