

Q&A: Overbearing Manager

Tuesday, January 9, 2024

Leni Cummins discusses the bounds of the managing agent's role in condominiums and cooperatives with CooperatorNews.

Leni discusses a property manager's control over the board, including the alleged withholding of login information for homeowner meetings and filling vacant board seats without elections in CooperatorNews. She stresses that if the property manager intentionally withholds login information, it could be problematic, and homeowners should inform the board about the situation.

“As to filling vacant board seats without an election—that is quite common. Most association bylaws direct boards to fill vacancies for the remainder of the term of the vacating board member. However, that does not excuse the board from its obligation to hold elections,” Leni noted.
