Alison concentrates her corporate practice on capital markets and mergers and acquisitions. She brings experience in drafting corporate resolutions, legal opinions, and correspondence with securities exchanges, in addition to her knowledge on due diligence reporting. Alison has excellent legal research skills and is knowledgeable about various Canadian laws and regulations governing businesses, securities, and investments.

While completing her articles at one of Western Canada's leading law firms, Alison focused on capital markets and mergers and acquisitions, including working on numerous transactions in the mining, health technology, and clean energy industries.

Alison earned her Juris Doctor degree from the University of Victoria, where she gained practical experience by participating in the Business Law Clinic. She also interned as a summer law student with the Market Regulation Branch of the Ontario Securities Commission. Alison earned her bachelors of commerce with honors from Queen University's Smith School of Business and concurrently completed a certificate in law from Queen's University.
